Between Abbeville and Noailles, in a long sandy bank, the swallows issued from their holes, where perhaps they had been sleeping all the winter. The manufactures of Abbeville and Beauvais did not seem to have kept pace with the improvement of the soil during the revolution. In 1788, Beauvais employed 120 workmen in manufacturing carpets of all sorts under the direction of Monsieur Demenou, who retired from the concern in 1792. In 1802, Monsieur de Berderbusch, the prefect of the department, re-established the business, and carried it to a high degree of perfection; but at this moment the number of workmen employed does not exceed 40. The principal church at Beauvais is the cathedral, which is...
