James got angry, stamped and cried--To snatch his top from Johnnie tried, He pushed and pulled and scratched and bit, But still he failed in getting it. But Johnny didn't want to fight, And said to James: It is not right To let your passion rise so high, And, like a hahy, fight and cry Because you've lost and I have won--Such boys we always ought to shun. There! Take your top and marbles, too! I'll never play again with you! I do not like to play with boys Who fight because they lose their toys; They like to win, they do--oh, yes! And so they prove their selfishness. Running blindly down he fell, With a yell, In a well! Out they fished him with a net, Dripping wet, Yes, you bet! Mother spanked him o'er and o'er, Hear him roar, Oh! so sore! All because a little fly Ventured nigh In his eye. When I was only a little tot I was always delighted with what I got, But now, since of toys I have such a store, I always am wishing for something more. I suppose it's the same the older we grow--It seems in the nature of girls to be so; And the boys are the same--don't you think I am right? When they've every thing else they will cry for a kite. When nice things in another's possession we see, Oh, why...
