Excerpt: . . . constantly show a haemoglobin percentage of from sixty-five to twenty-five per cent. , and the ultimate prognosis is obvious unless we appreciate the necessity of overcoming this deficiency. At the present I wish to outline Futterers mode of treatment, the success or failure of which determines the necessity of surgical intervention. (i) If we diagnose an ulcer of the stomach, or if in the absence of convincing symptoms which are so often lacking, we have cause to suspect an ulcer, we must at once ascertain the percentage of haemoglobin. (2) We advise the patient to go to bed, either in a hospital or at home, employing the services of a trained nurse. (3) We give the juice of five pounds of fresh beef daily as the case may require to bring the percentage of haemoglobin up to normal as soon as possible (prepared beef...
