Excerpt: .after January 1, 1917, and the foregoing statements made complete to December 31, 1916, for the information of the legislature and the general public. CONCLUSION. A study of the foregoing report we believe will result in the conviction that the State needs a department of inspection and supervision of public ofnces, and that such a department should not be limited in its scope to a mere audit of the accounts of the office examined. We have construed the law creating this department as being broad enough to authorize us to make a direct or collateral examination and investigation into all the transactions of a public official. We have every reason to believe that the refusal of this department to confine its activities to a mere checking of the financial accounts of public offices and its insistence upon the strict observance by public officers of...
