BANKS EXPOSURE TO FOREIGN FINANCIAL LOSSES 3 A fifth type of risk, systemic risk, is the direct concern of regulators and policymakers rather than of individual banks. Assessing and monitoring systemic risk has become a demanding task as rising numbers of foreign transactions create significant interdependence among the worlds financial markets. Credit Risk Credit risk (also known as default risk) is the possibility that a borrower will not meet his or her contractual obligations. For a traditional loan, credit risk is the possibility that a banks loan customer will not make timely interest or principal payments. For derivatives, that concept extends to the risk that the other party in a derivative contract - the so-called counterparty - will be unable to meet the contracts obligations. In recent years, banks have begun to manage credit risk by using credit derivatives - contracts in which the payoffs de-3 pend partly on...
