Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Mr. Bower s Answer to a New Charge Brought Against Him in a Libel, Intituled, Bower and Tillemont Compared This acquaintance produced a courtship, and the courtship ended in a contract of marriage. After he had laid himself under this engagement, he put off the fulfilling of the contract from time to time, pretending that he was at law for an estate in Scotland; and that he could not marry, conveniently, till he was put in possession of this income. Under this pretence he continued his intimacy and visits to the gentlewoman, after she had left her former situation, and lived with a near relation, her brother, in whose house she still resides, not many miles north from London. This gentleman being acquainted with the affair, and finding reason to suspect that our worthy gallant had no intention to do justice to his sister, interfered, and after a negotiation, in the course of which Mr. Bower s shuffling, inconsistent character was sufficiently displayed, the affair was at last accommodated by the payment of five hundred...
