Excerpt: . last time straightened the basket containing the roses, and a moment later my guests, exhausted with having climbed four flights of stairs, stood panting before my door. I opened. The Baroness, dazzled by the lights, clapped her hands as if she were admiring a successful stage setting. Bravo! she exclaimed, you are a first-class stage manager. Yes, I replied, I occasionally amuse myself with play-acting, for the sake of discipline and patience. I took off her cloak, bade her be welcome, and made her sit down on the sofa. But she could not keep still. With the curiosity of a woman who has never been in a bachelor s chambers, but has gone straight from her father s house to that of her husband, she began to examine the room. She seized my penholder, handled my blotter, searched about as if she were determined to discover a secret. Strolling to my book-shelves, she glanced curiously at the back of the volumes. In passing the looking-glass she stopped for a few seconds to arrange her hair and push the end of a piece of lace into the opening of her blouse. She examined the furniture, piece by piece, and smelt the flowers, all the time uttering little cries of delight. When she had finished her voyage of discovery round my room, she asked me, naively, without any arrierepensee, seeking with her eyes a piece of furniture which appeared to be missing-- But where do...
